

Multicultural disaster – letter to the Spectator

From Mr Geoff Bond

Sir: How wonderful of Mark Steyn ('Tolerance means terror', 14 July) to speak up for the downtrodden masses - those of us who have seen our population bullied into the greatest social upheaval since the Norman Conquest - all in the vain pursuit of the 'tolerance of diversity' mirage. In Northern Ireland we can't even organise just two diverse peoples to share the same territory in harmony. What chance have we when there are many?

I spend much time in America, where they have overturned their inspiring and powerful formula of 'each individual equal in the eyes of the state' in favour of gender, racial and minority rights and preferences. As a result, the American population is splintering into competing interest groups. It has become a Balkanised, ill-at-ease society, suffering from multiple personality disorder.

Will the British population wake up in time to reverse the multicultural disaster that is being visited on the nation by the well-meaning, but hopelessly naive, liberal consensus?
